

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A liquid crystal display is provided, which includes: a pair of first and second signal lines transmitting select pulses having opposite polarity; a third signal line transmitting data voltages; first and second field generating electrodes separated from each other with a gap; and a plurality
5 of diodes connected between the first and the second signal lines and the first and the second field generating electrodes and providing at least two different resistances.